Snotface14 Published July 24, 2009 , 9:29 a.m. Does anyone know where I could find some time pay for piping practitioners? The little girl next door (12) was asking me to teach her how to decorate cakes so she could make her mom a special birthday cake next month, so I thought I'd find some practice patterns for her to go with, now I can make letter type ones easy on the computer, but thought I'd be able to find some more interesting but basic enough bits for her to go on, but can't find much of anything. Would love some basic scrolls and starts etc, as well as some animals or similar that can be printed and put under acetate to copy as such so that it can get used to pressure and speed, etc. Any ideas???? Cheers Andy bashini posted July 24, 2009, 10:59am Hello Andy, is this what you are looking for? need to click on the printed practical sheet. Snotface14 Posted on July 24, 2009, 11:32am Yes thank you that was exactly what I was after!!! Will still love yet, though, if anyone else has any ideas BREN28 posted on July 24, 2009 , 4:48 p.m. can you get to host Wilton Grade 1 and 2 books? they have practice sheets in them that I cut out of the book, I laminated the mine so I could practice right on it, or you could buy a little practice board that is just a card board covered with plastic and has a clear plastic sheet attached so that you can put a practice sheet that you cut out of the book between them and practice you piping on it. Snotface14 posted July 25, 2009, 5:27 a.m. Thanks for the tip, but Wiltons aren't very well known here in New York if your in know, so I certainly never saw any classes of books, in fact I had never even heard of classes until I came here lol. I could play with a music clip or something and see if I could come up with anything myself I guess. bashini posted 25 July 2009 , 8:33 am nadine_n posted July 26, 2009 , 9:24 p.m. quote: Thank you very much! I will be teaching a course for children next week, and this sheet is exactly what I need. I had planned to make copies of some of Wilton's practice sheets, but thought they would look bad when copied in black and white and colored copies would be too $$$! Posted 27 July 2009, 3:44 p.m. I once took an unofficial non-Wilton class. What they did was take pictures of their own piping, printing and laminate it, and us pipe over it. Lamination made it possible to erase it and start over. BREN28 Published July 28, 2009 , 4:02 p.m. Snotface14, look under the reference bashini put up on Wilton, go under decoration 101, and then find easy buttercream decorating techniques. For our club meeting in early February (we met once a month), we invited my aunt to come and share cake decorating tips and skills with the girls. She provided the icing, I provided home baked cutout cookies (heart, of course!). Below, you'll see Wilton's Icing Fun Cake Jewelry Workshop lesson plan, which came directly from Wilton's website.... www.wilton.com below the handout I gave to the girls and their parents so they can clearly see what is required of them for this month's skills if they want their daughters to earn a silver pin. We decided not to award them a gold pin this year because they were still quite young and would not fully master these skills - they were just beginners! Using Wilton's website as well as my own graphics, I made several Practice boards for girls to try at our club that evening as well as at home. I printed them home in advance and then took them to our nearby office supply store so they laminated using a pocket laminator, which is a very heavy thick lamination. By doing this, the girls now have a two-way cake decorating practice sheet that they could work with icing and tips right on the board. Because lamination was so heavy duty, practice boards can also be washed away in hot, soapy water and reused over and over again. I'm sure some of these girls will use these practice boards to teach their kids how to decorate cakes and cookies! I have three sample pages here. If you want to do a two-way practice board for your child or kids at your club, select two pages that you would like to use, print them out, and laminate them back to the front. Enjoy! Here's Wilton Cake Decorating website Icing Fun Workshop completion certificate. We gave one of them to each girl at the end of the club meeting that night. They were very excited to get one!
